FAIRCHILD CAMERA TRIUMPHS

Invention of American War Takes Victory Photographs of Dayton, Ohio, From Altitude of Six Miles From Earth's Surface.

On May 3 a special wire was received from Captain A. W. Stevens of the government Air Service which was source of great satisfaction to the Fairchild Aerial Camera corporation of New York city, of which Sherman M. Fairchild of Oneonta, inventor of the camera, is president. The message came from Dayton, Ohio, and contained this record-breaking news:

"High altitude pictures made with the Fairchild camera today actually measured 11,500 feet above sea level. Camera worked perfectly."

This most severe test (which is of great military as well as commercial value) speaks volumes for the design, reliability and workmanship put into the Fairchild Aerial Camera, which is now known the world over as the finest and most efficient apparatus made for aerial surveys and oblique photography. Copies of the photographs made on the record flight are beautiful examples, unusually sharp and clear.

Clippings from Dayton papers have this to say concerning the marvelous work of the Fairchild camera, and of its operator:

"Breaking the two-man altitude record of the world which has been untouched for five years, Lieutenant John A. Macready, test pilot, and A. W. Stevens, aerial photographer, soared nearly 12 miles high in the LePere altitude ship at McCook field Friday afternoon."

"The flight was of special military significance, officers reported Saturday, because the airmen obtained remarkable photographs from that high point. These were the highest that have ever been taken and give a reproduction of the entire city on one plate."

"From a military standpoint, Lieutenant Macready asserted that the photographic achievement has great value because the ship is out of sight of land during the whole procedure and so high that the motor is inaudible."

Even if the photo ship is discovered at such an unusual height, it could not be attacked by other planes or even from the ground. With several exposures taken from that altitude, engineers would have an accurate layout of the enemy's territory, and could easily enlarge portions of the picture to a point where guns, fortifications and camouflaged emplacements would be visible."

"While at the ceiling of the trip, Lieutenant Stevens lifted the camera to the top of the cockpit and took an oblique photograph. Although immediately over the city, the camera leaned at such an angle as to photograph Wilbur Wright field."

"The camera is officially known as the K-3, and was developed by the Fairchild corporation of New York. It is equipped with a 12-inch lens, which made the wide angle picture possible."

The story also states that the thermometer on this flight registered 52 degrees below zero, and several times when Lieutenant Stevens removed the oxygen tube from his mouth in order to lean forward to read the altimeter, he almost collapsed. It was his habit to hold his head back.

Private funeral services for Catherine Kimble Powell, wife of the late George Powell of this city, were held yesterday afternoon at the Packard undertaking rooms on Broad street. The ritual service of the Protestant Episcopal faith was read by Rev. L. C. Denney, pastor of St. James' church, of which the deceased was a communicant, and interment was beside her husband in the family plot in Glenwood cemetery. Friends of the family acted as bearers.

Miss Emma Kimble of Albany and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Kimble of Rensselaer, the two former being niece and nephew of the deceased, were present at the service.

Brother Dead in Birmingham.

Base Raphael Painting Is Found in Boston Mansion

Above is shown the "Madonna Gonzaga," by Raphael, which has been found after a search lasting more than thirty years. Originally this rare canvas was owned by Napoleon Bonaparte, and was later brought to this country by a brother of Patrick E. Duffee. The latter asserts the painting was kept by his brother in lieu of payment of a $200,000 loan. The painting was found in the attic of an old mansion in Boston.

part because the material may not have been properly mixed.

Other suggestions were made by Mr. McDonald and it was finally decided that the company should get ready to resurface the pavement but that before the work was actually begun, since, as Mr. McDonald said, he did not want to make the same mistake twice, experts be summoned both by city and company, who should inspect and analyze the present pavement and recommend what should be done to make a satisfactory surface.

In considering the type of pavement used, Mr. Gurney stated that that put down here in 1923 had been used in Albany, Schenectady, Richfield Springs and on state road work in New York and New Jersey, and had proven fully satisfactory.

The final determination of the board and Mr. McDonald was to have expert chemists and asphalt men on the ground Thursday or Friday of the present week, in order that there should be no delay in the work.

Bills were audited and other business transacted, one of the matters considered being the acceptance of Brewer avenue. The members decided to inspect the street and if in their opinion the agreement made two years ago had been fully complied with, then the street would be accepted.

IT COSTS MUCH LESS TO DO IT NOW

Prices are down. Delay in painting because of price is no longer an excuse.

But regardless of price, it always costs more to paint than to paint. Decay and rust never let up. And the very next rainstorm may thoroughly soak unprotected spots and start real deterioration.

Suppose that every five years you invest $20 in good paint. That's $4 a year. Neglect will cost you many times that amount some day in building materials.

And that $20 investment in good paint will add several hundred dollars to the value of your home, besides preserving your pride in an attractive place, which in itself is worth something.

Good paint we say. Cheap paint isn't cheap—it's expensive.

Lucas Tinted Glass Paint, covering 350 to 400 square feet, two coats, costs less to start with than cheap paint which covers 200 to 250 square feet. And enduring much longer, this first cost is still further reduced.

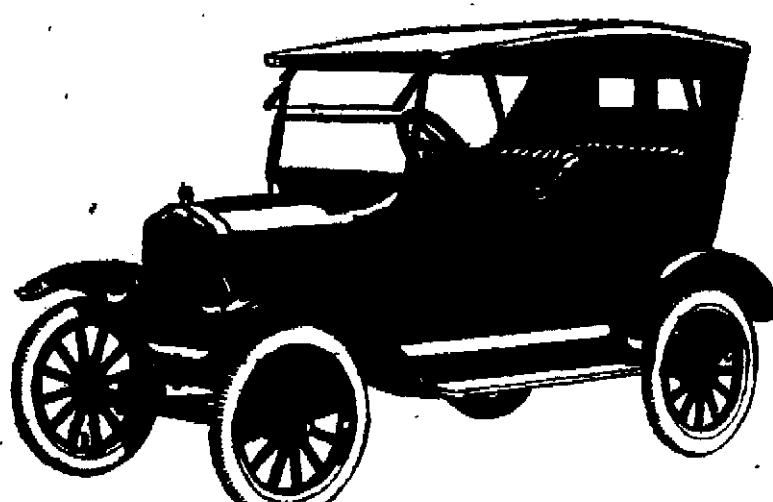

The Reason for this is that the Lucas materials are ground days longer, more rigid laboratory tests are made, and a larger percentage of high grade linseed oil is used—which not only gives a more beautiful gloss but causes deeper penetration and greater durability.

There's only one place in town to get this paint—at our store. We have the exclusive agency for it—and proud of it.

A FORTUNATE KID

Six Weeks Old Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Peters of Hobart in Delaware County Carriage — Other Hobart News.

Hobart, May 19. — The six weeks old infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Peters of this village was considerably bruised but luckily escaped death on Sunday morning when the baby carriage in which she had been put to sleep became loosened and ran down a steep flight of stairs from the porch of the family's apartments.

Mr. Peters put the carriage containing the infant on the porch for an airing and blocked the wheels and set the brake on the carriage, but he had scarcely entered the house when he heard a banging on the stairs and rushed out to find that the carriage had become loosened, and had descended the stairs to the street.

The baby remained in the vehicle most of the way which probably accounted for her escaping with no more serious injuries.

Many friends will congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Peters on the fortunate outcome of the accident and will hope that no complications will develop.

New Discovery Stops The Ravages of Age

Wipes Out Wrinkles in 10 Minutes. Prevents Facial Aging

This was when beauty was helped by the use of the famous Olanor cream. First, the wrinkles came to the surface, then they disappeared. Age showed first in the face and hands — for all the world to see. But now science has come to beauty's rescue!

A noted Spanish Chemist, Joaquin Olanor, who has devoted much time and energy in research along this line, has at last discovered a beautiful preparation that removes wrinkles in 10 minutes.

This discovery is in the form of a scientific combination of pure vegetable oils which its discoverer has called Olanor. This marvelous preparation rejuvenates the skin, regardless of age. It removes wrinkles — every trace of them — from the face and hands, tightens up all flabby spots, and restores the glowing complexion and smooth, rounded contours of youth.

Olanor works on an entirely new principle, for it gets at the cause of wrinkles — under the skin. Wrinkles cannot be covered up or masked out. The underlying tissue, weakened by age, must be revitalized.

Best of all, the results of Olanor are guaranteed. If you are not delighted with the remarkable effects of your very first tube, every cent you paid for it will be returned without question. You can get Olanor with this money-back guarantee from the following good stores:

Geo. S. Stude, Station Drug Store, N. B. Olanorville, Sherman Pharmacy, Everybody's Drug Store, Dickson Bros.

Get more power—yet save 30% on gas!

Engineers prove this possible for any car. Two years of tests

Your motor is rated for certain power.

Now you can have it. Power—speed—flexibility. New pleasure for driving.

And save 30% of what gas costs you a year!

Note curve on chart

In the chart above we give you two important bits of information. Note the column of type at left-hand side of the chart. That tells the requirements gas must meet to give real power, real flexibility. Because all gas is made up of combustible units. The first 10% of them should give quick starting. The second 10% — flying pick-up. The rest, solid pulling-power, speed, mileage.

Now note how the curve of PUROL performance coincides at every point with the ideal requirements! It gives the combustible units needed. That's because it is refined to specifications built on actual motor tests.

30% savings proved

Gas that gives full power also reduces upkeep in general. And the other way around. For two years our engineers have tested PUROL — in 25 different cars. Results of these tests prove:

That PUROL gives 3.3% greater mileage. That PUROL burns cleanly — saving 14.2% of the fuel that usually drips down into the crankcase. That is the way PUROL saves $2.98 a year on lubricating oil. And through the greater efficiency of undiluted lubricating oil, saves $16.33 a year in general repairs.

The average car used 500 gallons of gasoline a year. Thus the first two PUROL savings—87% gallons at 20¢—are $17.50. The four together show a yearly saving of $30.81. 30% of the average

The Coming New York Meeting a Many Candidate Affair, With Platform Problems and Contests for Ticket Honors.

By FRED A. SMYTH
(Washington Correspondent of The International Syndicate, Formerly Capital Manager of The Associated Press and Chief, Bureau of Foreign Intelligence, State Department.)

DEMOCRATIC leaders, like the prophets and followers of Mahomet, have their eyes fixed toward the East, where the pick of their politicians will foregather in the Madison Square Garden in New York on June 24 without real concentration on any candidate. Not for many years has there been such a wide variety of receptive candidates. The potential include avowed candidates like Underwood and McAdoo, heavy boomers like those of Ralston, Copeland and Smith, old timers like Cox and Bryan, a party idol like Cummings and Siler, state favorites like Jonathan Davis, Josephus Daniels, Carter Glass and Joseph T. Robinson, and a host of others more or less in the limelight.

The available timber reads like a "Who's Who of Democracy." Put on your slate a complete list of all the potentials, extract one commanding name from the roster and pick any one of the rest for Vice-President. Some are eager. Others are reluctant but willing. Paradoxical as that may seem, it's a fight among the candidatures of the East and the West and the South, with the two-thirds handicap against all of them.

The convention, called by Chairman Hull, of the Democratic National Committee, will begin at noon. There will be 1938 delegates. Of these, it will be necessary for a candidate to secure 722 to become the convention's nominee for President or Vice-President. There's where the hard sledding comes for aspirants, the Democratic Convention's two-thirds requirement as against the Republican majority choice. That requirement has balked in the past candidates who have rolled up a majority of delegates, notably Champ Clark, at the Baltimore convention in 1912. Any political prognosticator pinned down to a single man at the New York convention may go awry. The fight there will be spectacular, the contest will be protracted and the balloting may keep the convention in session a week.

But for the linking of his name with the oil inquiry at Washington, William Gibbs McAdoo would have commanded close to a majority of the votes at the opening of the New York convention, though with no assurance of making the grade from there up to two-thirds. Erewhile New York lawyer and tunnel builder, Wilson's Secretary of the Treasury and Director General of Railroads during government ownership and later by Los Angeles lawyer, he had become by astute campaign management easily the foremost candidate, avowed or receptive.

Then came the political bombshell of his immense retaining fees by Doherty interests for legal services complicated in the public mind with his personal influence with the administration he had just left. His campaign reeled under the sinister blow. Backed to a finish by his campaign managers' conference, helped by a clean bill of health message from the oil inquisitor, Senator Walsh, of Montana, boosted by a sweeping victory in his native state, Georgia, he will go into the convention asserting optimism for himself and controlling a block of votes potential when thrown to another personal proselyting. The other three, despite personal and political virtues, have been classed as "wet" and McAdoo is "dry."

John W. Davis, West Virginia's favorite native son and now head of a big New York law firm representing corporations including, it is said, the powerful J. P. Morgan interests, is democracy's idol. He used to be a West Virginia Congressman, then Solicitor General of the United States and was Wilson's Ambassador to Great Britain. If upon returning from the court of St. James he had resumed his West Virginia law practice, he would today hold the Democratic nomination for President in the hollow of his hand. But political sentiment is sensitive to the flashpots of the money devil. A senatorial friend wrote him suggesting he drop his corporate clients to strengthen himself politically. He declined point blank, saying: "Any lawyer who surrenders his independence by trimming his professional opinion, in my judgment not only dishonors himself but degrades his great profession. I would not pay this price for any honor in the gift of man." Davis, nevertheless, will be a conspicuous figure at the convention. His position is that while he does not intend to seek the nomination, "no man rightly can or ought to shrink from duty laid on him." He regards the presidency as a responsibility to be assumed rather than an honor to be pursued.

Dark Horses

Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, whose loyalty to McAdoo is undisturbed, may inherit the bulk of the McAdoo adherents when McAdoo goes on the rocks. He has steadfastly contended that no Democratic official and no Democratic candidate has been touched by the oil inquiry. Cummings was put forward in 1926 as a supporter of Wilson and the League of Nations, but did not get much demonstration. His speech as temporary chairman at that convention, outlining the issues of the campaign, won encomium and President Wilson called it a masterpiece. He made a strong impression upon the delegates, to most of whom he is personally known, through 24 years' service as Connecticut member of the National Committee. He is not to be ignored, though for McAdoo while McAdoo lasts.

Besides Smith, Copeland and Davis, two other New Yorkers have been suggested though with little promise of success. They are David F. Houston, Wilsonian Secretary of Agriculture and Secretary of the Treasury, North Carolinian born and now head of the Bell Telephone Securities Company, and Bainbridge Colby, Wilson's last Secretary of State, a brilliant speaker who was once a progressive.

Then there's the William J. Bryan bugaboo. Bryan, thrice an unsuccessful party nominee, is willing to run again but he will not Troubadour Bryan he was called by a magazine writer when as Secretary of State he was accustomed to meander out on the chateaux circuit and talk to the wayfarers in the small towns. And a chateaux lecturer's value depends on his keeping in the limelight. That's Bryan, who visualizing the barest sort of a possibility of his own nomination, pronounced for a Florida University president, Dr. A. A. Murphree, as his candidate. Next to himself, Bryan would not be displeased at the nomination of his brother, Gov. Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska. Bryan wants more prohibition, tax reduction, cancellation of the foreign debt if the nations disarm, a progressive presidential nominee and Bryan. Sen. James A. Reed, of Missouri, is among those whose booms have died aborning. Likewise, Atlas Pomeroy, of Ohio.

Vice-Presidential Timber
If first place goes to the East, second place on the ticket goes to the West and vice versa. There's a long list of names for the vice-presidential slot. Cummings might drop into second place. Gov. Jonathan M. Davis, of Kansas, who owns and operates a 1700 acre farm, champions the Eighteenth Amendment and urges law enforcement and cheaper freight and passenger rates, has been pronounced by Bryan, "sound on every question and available for President."

Then there's Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas, party pilot. George Harvey recently visualized the Democratic ideal ticket as "Robinson and Siler." Robinson as Democratic leader of the Senate has proven able, popular and clear-headed. Siler, friend of Governor Smith, of New York, is a wet governor of a wet state, New Jersey. Edwin T. Meredith, of Iowa, Wilson's Secretary of Agriculture, a publisher, methodist, Mason and founder of the Jefferson Highway, is another vice-presidential possibility.

Favorite Sons
Favorite sons and complimentary booms include: Senator Carter Glass, Virginia, Secretary of the Treasury under Wilson; Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Maryland; Josephus Daniels, North Carolina; Wilson's Secretary of the Navy; Gov. William E. Sweet, Colorado; two Chicagoans, John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior under Wilson, and Mayor William E. Dever, sponsored by "Boss" Brennan; former Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana; Sen. Woodbridge M. Ferris, Michigan; Rep. Cordell

Problem of the Pinnacle Rocks Which Endanger Shipping in Alaska - The Submarine Washington Monument - Bottomless Lakes, One of Which Occupies the Crater of an Extinct Volcano.

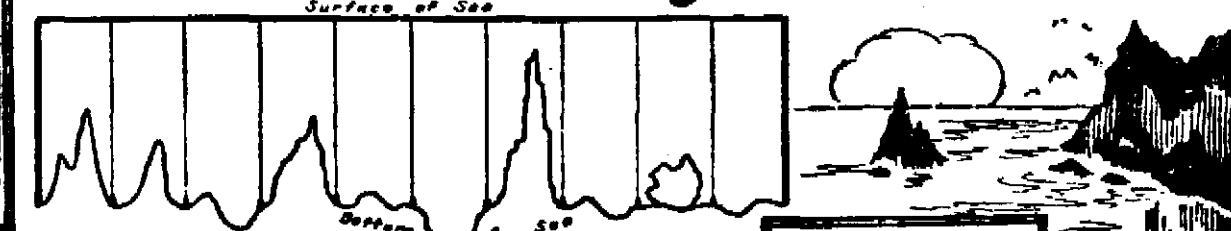

THE late President Harding, on his trip to Alaska, passed close by a submarine danger which only a few years ago might easily have wrecked the ship that carried him and his party. It is a "pinnacle rock," known as the Washington Monument, near the main steamer route, and its existence was not ascertained until 1913.

The voyage in that part of the world notes that the Alaskan shores, generally speaking, are very rocky and precipitous. On every hand he saw rugged mountain ranges with sharp, jagged peaks.

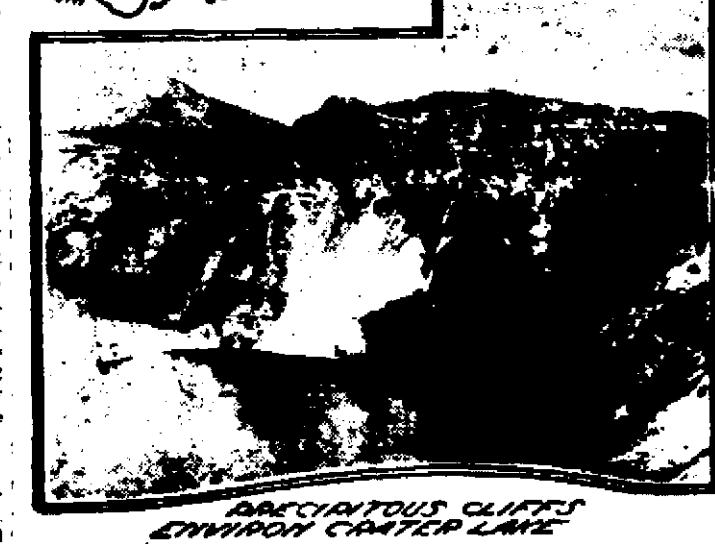

It may not occur to him, however, to realize that these peculiar features are duplicated in the waters beneath him. Yet that is the fact. The tops of the highest peaks appear above the surface as rocky and precipitous islets. Others of less elevation rise to within a few feet of the surface, waiting to flip over the bottom of any ship that comes their way. There is no sign of the hidden menace, no break or ripple of waves above the placid glass surface.

Many years ago there was a vessel called the Albatross, which was sent to chart the bottom of the Gulf of Alaska. It was the first of a series of ships sent by the United States Navy to explore the waters of Alaska. The Albatross was the first of a series of ships sent by the United States Navy to explore the waters of Alaska.

Studying the Depths of Strange Waters

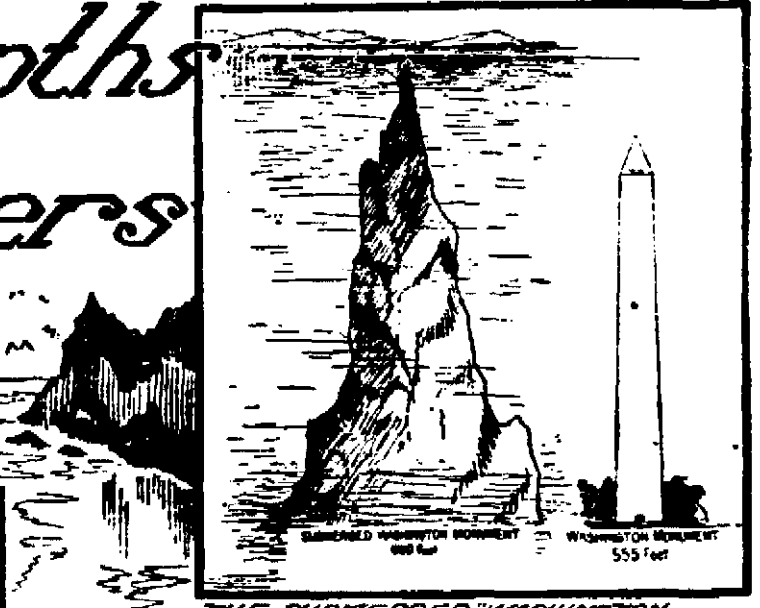

SKETCH SHOWING BOTTOM PROFILE FREQUENTLY ENCOUNTERED IN ALASKAN WATERS

Just how a lake can manage to get along without any bottom has never been satisfactorily explained. Why, under such circumstances, does not the water drop out of it? And, if this were to happen, would there not be a hole clear through to the other side of the earth? It is hard to answer these questions. But it may be mentioned, for the sake of illustration, that Payette Lake, in Idaho, formerly declared bottomless, has recently been proved to have a maximum depth of 661 feet.

The deepest lake in the United States, or anywhere in America, occupies the crater of an extinct volcano in Oregon. It is familiarly known as Crater Lake. It is nearly circular, with a diameter of about five miles, and has a depth of 1,938 feet. Sometimes it has no lake significant sheet of water in north-central Washington, occupying a valley scooped out in a bygone age by a glacier, and surrounded by lofty mountains that rise to snow-capped peaks. Its greatest depth is 1,483 feet.

Fourth is Pend Oreille Lake, in Idaho, with a maximum depth of 1,264 feet.

Now is the time for the wheel boy in the clam to hold up his hand and say that the Great Lakes have been forgotten. But the truth is that the deepest of those "unsalted seas," Lake Superior, is nowhere deeper than 1,000 feet, so far as ascertained. Lake Michigan (whose bottom, strange to say, is 400 feet below the level of the sea) is fathomed in its deepest part by a plumb-line not much over 900 feet long.

Even Crater Lake is surpassed in this respect by Lake Baikal, in Siberia, which is over 250 miles long and 2,600 feet deep.

But Crater Lake is in its own way the most interesting lake in the world. Though held in a deep cup in the top of a high mountain, in a crater where waters are hot and cold, its surface never freezes—the reason why being that there is so great a volume of water in it that the surface could begin to develop ice. Possibly, too, some volcanic heat may yet remain to warm the waters of Crater Lake.

Ancient Volcanic Activities
That region was anciently the scene of tremendous volcanic activity. Within a radius of 100 miles there are thousands of extinct craters, but the biggest of them all is that which contains the famous lake. The bottom of the latter is lower than the feet of the Cascade Range, and is almost perfectly level, judging from the soundings. All around the lake is a wall by almost vertical cliffs 2,000 feet high.

In its western part, however, a pile of lava 2,500 feet high rises from the bottom, its top forming Wizard Island. In this top is a crater 150 feet in depth.

Once upon a time there was neither pit nor lake, and instead might have been even an enormous cone towering into the sky and forming a prominent peak of the Cascade Range. It was a giant volcano then. Apparently no motive retreats found an outlet near its base and escaped there; then the top fell in, leaving the pit which now holds the lake; and the final eruption of the cone is represented by the pile of lava whose top is called Wizard Island.

ROTARY AND KIWANIS CLUBS SCORE TRIUMPH IN WOMANLESS WEDDING

Bill, Maxwell Morris, Judson Lutesy, J. Leslie Bagg, Cecil Smith, Charles Buck and Raymond Hughson, made a pleasing dancing background.

The choruses which perhaps evoked the most applause was the Dance of the Wooded Soldiers, in which the following young ladies, appropriately costumed, rendered the famous number from the Chauve Souris: Helen Keenan, drummer; Helen Fisher, Irene Brand, M. Gladys Platter, Edith Quinn, Barbara Goodwin, Gertrude Byard and Marjorie Wheeler.

Another enjoyable number was that in which L. J. Bookhout sang cleverly of Humpty Dumpty, supported by a chorus composed of the following: the Misses Helen Keenan, Marjorie Wheeler, M. Gladys Platter, Vesta Chamberlain, Barbara Goodwin, Irene Brand, Helen Dibble and Gertrude Byard. Robert Hall and Robert Taylor made a hit with "No Means Yes" and Robert Lutesy, as Glenda Gray, did an excellent solo dance, completely winning most of the audience to his sex.

One of the highlights of the production was the singing of "I Love You Truly," by Dr. Norman W. Getman and Linn J. Gardner. These gentlemen, who made the most charming music anywhere imaginable, have really fine voices and in addition are able to turn ventriloquist and throw their voices back of the scenes.

No portion of the play was more enjoyable than those in which the Old Bachelor, Eryn H. Chapiro, and the Old Maid, L. Keenan, Tupper, sang the comic of the stage. Their love affair, with Old Maid doing most of the loving, runs through the entire play. Mr. Chapiro was a typical bachelor, wary of the attentions of the opposite sex, while Mr. Tupper was perfection itself as Old Maid. Mr. Chapiro's musical contribution in this connection was "No One's Fool," in which he received the same hearty applause which always greets his singing. Mr. Tupper sang "Oh, How She Lied," in a very feeling manner.

Wedding Party Arrives.

The entertainment of the guests over the wedding party commences to arrive. First come the bridesmaids, W. O. Brannaman, William H. Hoffmann, John H. Brinkford, Frank A. Herrieff, Edward L. Sellers and Andrew C. Lange, charmingly attired and each carrying a handsome bouquet. The flower girls, with knee dresses and flowing curls setting off to advantage their 200 pound forms, happily hopped their way to the stage through a veritable riot of laughter and applause. They were Dr. William Apthorpe, Merrill C. Dibble, Dr. Leon H. Wayman and Edward Crippen. Dr. A. H. Brownell was master of ceremonies and the coo matron of honor was John S. Lauren. Dr. David H. Mills made a particularly winsome ring bearer. Finally came the groom, Leon VanWoert, dragged down the aisle by the best man, Leslie Gardner, and then the bride, Daniel Franklin, sweet and demure in a gown which brought out the full charm of her dainty form, leaning on the reassuring arm of her father, Herbert C. Getman.

After the audience had ceased laughing over the appearance of the combined wedding party, in which the portly bride and the diminutive groom were the most conspicuous features, Dr. Brownell read what is probably the most unique wedding ceremony ever concocted. After the pair had been "yoked," congratulations ensued. Suddenly Old Maid and Old Bachelor announced that they were ready to begin life's journey together and taking his cue from Old Maid, the entire company ended the performance by singing, "Oh Gee, Oh Gosh, Oh Golly I'm in Love."

Company Cleverly Costumed.

One of the most remarkable features of the production was the costuming, especially that of the male ladies. Each had evidently spent considerable time in the preparation of his costume for nearly every one was fully equipped with ear rings, bracelets, bandeaux, lavalliers, etc. The makeup, done by Thomas Dickson and the Miller sisters, was exceedingly clever and the majority of the men were not easily to be recognized, even on close inspection.

The show was a success, and this evening and judging by the way tickets are already going even standing room will be at a premium. Excellent as was last evening's performance it is expected that tonight's will be even better as minor mistakes will be corrected and a higher polish applied.

DEMONSTRATION TEAM

Miss Ota Day, Cornell Junior Extension Specialist, Addressed Local Leaders From Chicago and Baltimore Conventions.

A joint meeting of the Junior Project local leaders of Oneonta and Delaware counties was held at the High school building yesterday, beginning at 10 a. m. The meeting was held for the benefit of the leaders who are going to have demonstration teams and for the purpose of lining up demonstration teams for fairs in foods, clothing and food preservation.

Miss Ota Day, Junior Extension specialist from Cornell, had charge of the meeting. She emphasized the value of demonstration as a means of passing on one's knowledge to others and stated that it was really an important part of Junior Project work. She explained the competition of local teams in order to be represented in the county fair, and that the winners in the counties go to the State fair. The winning demonstration team in each county, with their leader is awarded a trip to Syracuse to the State fair.

Miss Day worked out a demonstration on the use of the pattern and in connection with it spoke of the qualities of a good demonstration. A good demonstration is one that shows plenty of action. Some particular point should be stressed and the process should not be of too long duration. Posters help to make the demonstration more interesting but care should be used to use the right illustration at the right time.

Home making projects were discussed by those present and the following suggestions for demonstration in clothing and foods were considered worth while and practical: for clothing, care of clothing, pattern adjustment, pattern drafting variations and the making of a kimono garment; for foods the simple baked, fast, the school lunch, salads suited to each of the four seasons and eggs and their use in the diet.

The demonstration teams this year are to consist of two girls instead of three and they will be judged on team work, subject matter, skill and the product.

BOY SCOUT RALLY PROGRAM

Scout Councils of Oneonta and Delaware Counties Program for Oneonta-Schools Boy Scout Rally to Be Held June 14.

Announcement was made yesterday by Scout Executive Harbeck of the program for the rally of the Oneonta-Schools Boy Scout Council to be held in this city on Flag Day, June 14. While many details of the rally still remain to be settled, still very good progress is being made, and it is hoped that the rally day will be one long to be remembered by those interested in the council.

There will be delegations from practically every troop in the council and a very large gathering is anticipated. Prizes will be offered for all of the events on the program and the interest and rivalry which they have created will certainly prove beneficial to the work of scouting in the whole council.

The program of the afternoon will be opened at 2:30 o'clock, when all of the troops will line up. The colors will then be presented to the council by David Forrest Wilber, Jr., of this city. Following the exercises, the Star Spangled Banner will be sung and the pledge to the flag and Scout oath and law repeated.

In the list of competitive events, which will be held during the afternoon, all of which will be run off in short and snappy fashion by Scout commissioners and deputies, are included Scout games, infantry drill competition, tug-of-war, dressing and undressing race, fire by friction, pyramid building, first aid obstacle race, antelope race and an axe contest.

Numerous splendid prizes, all of Scouting significance, have been arranged for all of the competitions, offered in order of comparative prominence. In Class A, embracing a horse and rider competition, the dressing and undressing race, fire by friction, first aid race, antelope race, and axe contest, the following prizes are to be awarded. The first, a bronze cup to the troop and red, white and blue streamers to the individuals; the second, a large troop flag and a red streamer to the individuals; and the third, a small troop flag and green streamers to the individual.

In Class B, covering the infantry drill competition alone, the first prize will be a large troop flag and blue streamers to the individuals; second, a small troop flag and red ribbons to the individuals; and third, green streamers to the individuals.

For the tug of war a small troop flag will be awarded and in the pyramid contest, a first aid pouch.

Further particulars of the rally will of course be carried in later issues of The Star.
